

1/4 MILLION BUILDING IN NEW LENOX

CREAM OF THE CROP TO OPPOSE MOKENA AND ORLAND LEADERS

ABOUT THIS — AND — ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

TIME?—Fleeting. That's what it is. This thought resurrected (most things are resurrected—been used by others many times in the past) by reading in a financial story that Wiebolt, a big Chicago store, has sold its store properties to an insurance company and then leased the properties from the insurance company for 30 years with renewal privilege for six successive times each for 10 years—or a total of 90 years from now. Business looks ahead. Time is nothing. New faces, new lives, new policies will be operating the business, right on through time. We are of so little permanent importance when measured by time.

GANDHI.—The Great Indian is dead. Peace to what's left. But more important: that his ideal of brotherhood shall materialize in India and in the world. Of course, some one will say, the columnist does not mean what he says. He does not want brotherhood. But that would be a wrong statement. I want brotherhood; not, understand, please, because I feel the need of it as a personal soul factor, or as an intellectual lift. I want it because so many others would be benefited, I am not willing to go ALL the way to get it.

EQUALITY.—One of the finest things about Gandhi was not his desire and his sacrifices to secure India's freedom from England. History probably will record that the day when Britain's flag was hauled down was the significant moment for a change in world history—and, from our standpoint, for the worse. It was the moment when destructive (from our viewpoint) communism saw its way open to the conquest of all Asia. Gandhi's greatest contribution to the world has been and is and will remain in his effort to wipe out the line between India's untouchables and the other people in India. A thousand, or two thousand, years from now, history, if it still exists, will record this effort of Gandhi's as having influence in the world equal to the influence of the Sermon on the Mount. Posterity will honor Gandhi for his efforts, as will many millions of present and future untouchables.

HOPELESS.—Full achievement is a hopeless task. Untouchables will continue untouchables for a long time. Those who have seen the Indian country, studied the conflicting Indian philosophies, felt the searing hate, the living fires of hatred—these know, as only visitors there can know, the impossible task to which the murdered Indian leader had set himself. Hatreds there are like smoldering hatreds here—only older, more matured, because of the longer life in that portion of the globe.

SACRIFICE.—But, before comparison is made as illustration of the preordained failure, let's pause a moment in appreciation for the momentous incident of the life of Gandhi, for his supreme sacrifice. Many among us who confine thoughts concerning religion to Jesus of Nazareth will disagree, but among Orientals the sacrifice of Gandhi will lift him to a spot of supreme deity within a few generations and people will accept his divinity without securing access to authoritative sources to learn facts. Has not that been the history of all religious followings? What our fathers and mothers learned from their fathers and mothers become the facts of life. No wonder we are like the "lost" children of Israel wandering in the wilderness—only a few miles from Opportunity.

UNIVERSAL.—Religious and racial hatreds are universal. If we have them among us, here, in such abundance, how can we expect "backward" people like all those who do not live where we live to do any better? In Spain, recently, Catholics protested to the Spanish dictator against allowing Protestant activity. Here, we had the Ku Klux Klan, a doleful, baneful, cancerous growth. Klan hated Catholics, Catholic hated Klan. Too much of hate abounds, and simply because neither Catholicism nor Protestantism is truly Christian. For hate does not live in the heart of a Christian. Then, there can be few who are more than formally Christian.

ETERNAL.—Go back to the Jewish Bible, our "Old Testament," and see what you find. Hatred for others of a different kind—remember that when brutality was poured upon little groups of people who resented the intrusion of the children of Israel, their leaders claimed that God told them to go in and kill every living thing, men, women, and children. Other times, they would kill the men, maybe the children, and take the women for other purposes. Occasionally they would simply destroy, but not TAKE ANYTHING away. After all, wouldn't the material things be there when the "children" moved in?

HONOR.—Yes, let's honor the great Gandhi. He has been a gracious spirit for good, a small spot of virtue on the eternal screen called time.

Saturday is the day of days in Tinsley Park, if you should ask a local basketball player—or, some one said the other day, if you merely stand and listen.

That's the day (if you have not already heard about it) when All-Stars (down-to-earth and up-to-basket kind) and opponents of All-Stars meet in the Tinsley Park gymnasium to determine whether the All-Stars are justly arrived by their title.

The opponents for the occasion happen to be from the neighboring villages of Orland Park and Mokena, and it might as well be kept in mind that the teams from those two places are the end-of-first-round champs, and some of them say that if you can find any better stars in the basketball firmament—well, then bring 'em on.

So, following the usual order of things in basketball around these parts, each of the other teams in the Southwest Basketball league will supply two men to compose teams to meet, the threat of Mokena Lightweights and Orland Park Heavyweights.

This week League President Bud Braasch announced the following list as the likely starters on the champ and on the All-Star teams when the whistle blows at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the Tinsley Park school gymnasium.

BOY SCOUTS THINKING ABOUT NEXT SUMMERS CAMPING FUN

Something seems to be going on the minds of Mokena Boy Scouts, troop 40, and the leaders, and the something appears to be concerned with what Boy Scouts do in the summertime—especially the camping phase of scouting.

This thought is suggested by an announcement that a public demonstration of scouting investiture and a court of honor scheduled for Sunday, February 15, would be a good place for boys to attend if they are interested in the kind of lives Boy Scouts lead, particularly at camping time in the summer. Place: Mokena school.

NEW LENOX GIRLS RECEIVE STUDENT CAPS AT SILVER CROSS CEREMONIES

Miss Dolores Bruns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bruns, Lincoln highway, New Lenox, and Miss Adonia Ruder, daughter of Mrs. I. A. Ruder, South Cedar Rd., New Lenox, were among the 32 freshmen who received student nurse caps in a candlelighting ceremony at exercises conducted January 28 by the school of nursing of Silver Cross hospital, Joliet. Both are graduates of the Joliet township high school and entered the nursing school last August.

Miss Adeline Jorstad, acting director of Silver Cross school, has announced that applications are now being received for the August, 1948, class in order that 1948 high school graduates may have an opportunity to consider nursing as a career before deciding on other plans. An attractively illustrated 36-page brochure describing student nurse activities and giving information about nursing as a career can be obtained by addressing a request to School of Nursing, Silver Cross Hospital, Joliet.

Mrs. C. F. Haley and daughter Miss Agnes, Marley. On Tuesday of last week Mrs. Haley celebrated her 90th birthday and for the occasion was dressed in a black crepe dress. She was assisted by daughters Miss Agnes and Mrs. W. B. Storm of DeKalb. Mrs. Irvin Jensen joined Mrs. Haley in celebration of identical anniversary—date, not years. Nearly 100 persons called to pay their respects to Mrs. Haley, who received two long-distance telephone calls during the day—one from nephew John Cooper, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and one from granddaughter and grandson Mrs. Barbara Jolley and Robert Storm, Corvallis, Ore. Flowers, cards, gifts were numerous. Mrs. Madge Storm registered the guests.

Mrs. W. Senning Wins Big Prize

Her long-time hobby of entering radio contests paid off handsomely Tuesday for Mrs. W. Senning of New Lenox, when she was presented with a $2,500 diamond ring.

Winner of the first prize in a national radio contest sponsored by the La France division of General Foods, Mrs. Senning was awarded the ring at her home by F. V. Filson, assistant district manager of General Foods sales division; W. Wilkerson, the Joliet territory manager, and W. L. Lamping.

The mother of seven children, Mrs. Senning has lived in New Lenox for 17 years. She belongs to the Church guild and the P. T. A.

George Marshall, New Lenox grocer where Mrs. Senning bought the product, at the same time was also given a $225 diamond ring.

Mr. Senning has been employed for the past 20 years by the Burroughs Adding Machine company in Joliet, but left last week for Tucson, Ariz., as a result of a transfer. The family is to join him soon.

MARLEY MAN DIES SUDDENLY WHILE WORKING IN GARAGE

Death came suddenly to Louis Nelson, 72, of Marley Tuesday morning, while he was working in his garage.

The body of Mr. Nelson was found by his wife, Mrs. Ellen Nelson, when she went to the garage on an errand. Although he had been ailing a bit, it was said, there had been no indication of impending death seizure through either the days or hours preceding his death.

Mr. Nelson was born in Ottawa in this state in 1876 and went to the Marley community in 1897. He has lived there since. He was an employee of the Wabash railroad for 55 years, as station agent and telegrapher.

Whitaker Handles The Transaction

Robert Fredim has begun operations expected to add largely to the tax values of New Lenox township while adding to the growing population. Added, also, an exit for people on East Cooper street into the village.

Mr. Fredim has started the construction of the first of 26 new homes in New Lenox, the operation being located one block north of Brookwood subdivision. The work was begun following extended negotiations with county and village zoning authorities.

The structures will all be in the $10,000 class, according to Melvin R. Whitaker, who has handled the negotiations leading up to the beginning of operations and who will handle the sale of the houses to be erected by Mr. Fredim. Not including the value of the real estate, the total finished sales value of the operation probably will reach the quarter-million mark.

As a part of the operation, Mr. Fredim will construct a new road to be called Oak View, connecting Cedar road and East Cooper street, providing a direct outlet from the East Cooper area to the village.

Mr. Fredim was the contractor on the operation which brought the Whitaker subdivision into existence.

Others are considering building operations this year, it is understood, both in the village of New Lenox and adjacent, and it is expected that a number of new buildings will be constructed by individuals both in the village and nearby.

With the constant growth of the village, business houses will have larger numbers to serve, and it is expected that New Lenox development and expansion will be extensive in the appreciable future.

FIVE-STAR WINNER . . . The five-point program of the Tupelo, Miss., Rural Community Development council forms the theme of this community booth, which won first place over 18 entries at the 1947 Mississippi-Alabama fair. Dairying, cotton, truck farming, poultry and forestry are the points emphasized by the council in its plea for diversified farming.

SMALL TOWN, U.S.A.

Mississippi Project Sets Pattern in Rural Planning

By EARLE HITCH

Released by WNU Features.

Country life must be made hopeful, healthy and happy if rural regions are to continue as the main source of our national strength. One of the major phases in the revamping of that rural pattern of living is the expansion of rural occupations. For the first time since the factory system put an end to handicrafts in the home and village shops, economic development is taking a turn favorable to the rural environment.

For more than a century it has been otherwise.

Rural enterprise, limited to farming and a dwindling retail trade, followed the path of non-resistance. Outside of the fertile farm belts and the mill towns of the upper South, country income has been declining as the land wore out and the people left for jobs in the city. Now, there are reasons to believe, that trend can be halted. Invention and discovery offer the earning opportunities for which the country has been waiting.

Spinning and churning are gone; likewise, old-fashioned tanning and butchering, milling and hoeing. But those lost occupations, sorely missed in the small farm communities, can be replaced. There is new and better work to be done, both on the land and in the local mills and plants. The community which wishes to increase the earning capacities of its population can do so.

New Pattern Evolves.

Wasted land can be restored and used for new kinds of small-farm tillage. New production systems, plus the extension of rural power lines, give country manufacture an edge it never has had before. These things, of course, cannot be brought about on a community-wide scale without careful planning and determined leadership. They are most effective when they are undertaken with a long range program for community development.

Rural economic problems are still too much neglected. Only a few intelligent and patient attempts have been made to find durable solutions. Consequently the plans that are succeeding are important not only as local programs, but also as patterns for other places, for there are vast areas of rural America which need some kind of economic rescue.

The most successful plans have to be adapted to particular conditions. Consumer tastes, market locations and the job of organizing public support have to be taken into consideration along with restoring the land and finding out what can be produced by the farmers and the other labor supply. This will take business backing and business management. It never has been sufficient to make a plan and count on it to work by popular voluntary support.

Ambitious Tupelo Project. Tupelo, Miss., has one of the most energetic and far-reaching plans in the country. It is a plan not for Tupelo primarily, but for the large rural area of which Tupelo is the center. The project is especially valuable from the fact that it is not limited to dealing with present rural problems, but also is looking ahead to problems that probably must be faced in the future.

The Tupelo program is no sudden outburst of enthusiasm. It has been several years in maturing, and it is the more effective now for having made progress with caution. It has not started to go anywhere until its supporters believe it is in their power to help it get there.

Chief aims are to encourage new types of farming, especially types that will aid in soil enrichment and at the same time yield better income to the small hill farmers. Poultry and fruit growing are being emphasized, and dairying has been backed for a number of years. To aid in getting this work started and to keep it going, several specialists have been hired with funds contributed by the program's backers.

Chief factor in success of the Tupelo plan is the kind of sponsorship it has. The leadership and the full influence of the Tupelo Daily Journal and its publisher, George McLean, are supporting the project. The Daily Journal has guaranteed the funds necessary for the first three years' activities. The Chamber of Commerce, of which McLean now is president, is doing its part by financing a special program in horticulture, which is allied with the plan in general.

Community Backing. In previous years banks and business men have helped introduce dairying and better dairy breeds. Tupelo business men realize that business will thrive and their town will grow to the extent that the entire community prospers. They are convinced that there should be more earning opportunities on the farms and in the rural neighborhoods. They are helping not only to build up a better farming industry, but also to promote new town industries that will make assured markets for things produced on the better farms.

The plan that has been developed covers five counties and is the biggest rural community development plan in the United States, in the number of people it affects and the extent of its program. It already is demonstrating how small farming resources can be improved when energy and imagination are applied.

The next article will give details that were followed in establishing the Tupelo plan.

Women Uphold Law On Idaho's Frontier

BURLEY, IDA.—Women still uphold the law in Idaho. When the only woman deputy sheriff in the state resigned to get married, Sheriff Saul Clark promptly appointed another woman to take her place. Marjorie Philbrook resigned as deputy sheriff to marry Cleve Johnson, state highway patrolman, so the sheriff gave her job to Mrs. Barbara Lindsay.

Chapel to Mark Bravery of Chaplains

PHILADELPHIA.—The bravery of four wartime chaplains, two Protestants, a Roman Catholic and a Jew, who gave up their lifebelts on a sinking troopship and were last seen standing together, arm in arm, their heads bowed in prayer, will be commemorated in a chapel being built here under sponsorship of the Philadelphia interfaith sponsoring committee.

The shrine, which will be known as the "Chapel of the Four Chaplains," will be open 24 hours a day and will provide facilities for the worship of Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic faiths. Approximately $150,000 has been raised for the chapel.

The chaplains were among 1,100 troops aboard the Dorchester, a troopship en route to Europe, when it was torpedoed and sunk in the North Atlantic on February 3, 1943.

Would Increase Benefits

With President Truman's new budget containing a proposal for slightly more than six billion dollars for veterans' benefits, a reduction of approximately three-quarters of a billion under the present fiscal year, a flood of new bills calling for more appropriations for veterans were introduced early in the second session of the 80th congress.

These bills included one to provide an increase in present veterans' benefits and removal of the three-year limitation on G.I. insurance; disability and death benefits to reserve personnel on active duty; renewal of G.I. insurance for an additional five years; extension of veterans' benefits to members of the civil air patrol who performed submarine patrol duty; allowances for feeding of seeing-eye dogs given to blind veterans; priority for veterans to purchase surplus residential real property; free distribution of blank ammunition to veteran organizations for funeral services; hospitalization for World War I veterans who were in the occupational forces, and numerous other measures.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was drafted July 27, 1944, from my position as an aeronautical engineer at Langley field, Hampton, Va. My boss at the field had asked for a deferment for me, but hadn't heard from Washington when I had to go to the reception center at Ft. George G. Meade, Md. He wrote a letter for me to take to the commanding officer asking him to hold me for 10 days. At the end of 10 days I had been approved by the NACA and was honorably discharged and put in reserve. The question is am I entitled to any benefits in any way? I am still working at Langley field. — K. W. G., Hampton, Va.

A. Since by any stretch of the imagination you were in service only 10 days you would not be eligible for any G.I. benefits, since the law requires at least 90 days on active duty unless released prior to that time for physical disability on a medical discharge. Even had you served the 90 days, your release for your own convenience to take a priority job would cancel some of the benefits, such as mustering out pay.

Q. I have been home from overseas now almost two years. During all that time I have been in an army hospital taking treatment for a tropical disease I contracted in the South Pacific. I have not been discharged, so can't go to a veterans' hospital. I am sick and tired of the atmosphere around this army hospital and on top of that they are not doing me any good. Isn't there any way I can get out of it and at least go to a private physician for treatment?—A. J. H., Buffalo, N. Y.

A. You are in a tough spot. Insofar as I can find out from the army there is nothing you can do about it, and the army certainly can't discharge you if you are sick. If the army doctors decide they can't do you any good you would go before a disposition board, be certified to Veterans' administration and then retired on pension. However that's up to the army doctors. If you are well enough to obtain a furlough so you could go home you might consult a private physician.

Q. We are very worried about our son. He spent several months in the hospital after he came home from overseas and finally was discharged from the army and now is drawing a disability pension from Veterans' administration. While his disability does not keep him bedfast and he is able to be up and around he is in a continually depressed condition and very morose. We were wondering if he could get into the vocational rehabilitation program. We have heard they do wonders for some veterans. Can you tell us the requirements and how to get into the work?—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. L., Muscatine, Iowa.

A. From your description of your son's condition and disability we believe he would be eligible to get into the vocational rehabilitation program if he can indicate a real need for this rehabilitation to overcome his disability handicap. Suggest that you contact your nearest Veterans' administration office for advice on where to apply for this training.

Q. Could you tell me where to write to find out about my son's insurance? He was in the navy and his wife got a divorce while he was in the service and he remarried again and I have never heard from him since he did remarry. I want to know if his insurance has been left to his children or to this last wife he married. I feel there has been foul play. — R. S., Douglas, Wyo.

A. Suggest that you write directly to the insurance division, Veterans' Administration, Washington, D. C. Be sure to give your son's full name.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Rub scuffed places on shoes with white of egg. The albumen sticks the scuffed leather down and helps prevent further peeling.

Closet lights should be above the door so that the full length of clothes will be completely illuminated.

Leather upholstery — and be sure it is genuine leather — can be best cleaned with ordinary saddle soap.

Use a pretty floral oilcloth runner on your teenager's dresser. This offers protection to wood underneath from such spilled liquids as perfumes and hand lotions.

The new glass blocks which have become popular as a building material are ideal for many things such as bath-rooms, bedrooms where you need light but not air, and kitchens. Glass blocks are claimed to be good insulation.

Men find that their coat pockets aren't quite deep enough to carry their thermos bottle in. Sew a strip of one-half inch black elastic above the pocket just high enough that it may be slipped over the unprotected part of the thermos bottle.

In using a chisel be sure the work is clamped tightly to a vice, especially if you are working on a small piece. Chip in a direction away from the body.

To mend cracks in china dishes, boil milk in a stain-resistant utensil such as porcelain enamel. Place damaged dishes gently in the milk. Allow to remain a few minutes and the crack should be mended.

After nylons are washed, it is difficult to mate them. Before wearing nylons, take embroidery floss of different colors and put matching stitches on the tops of each pair of stockings, thus: One pair green stitches, another red, etc. Stockings are then easily matched.

PEARL: COME HOME

It was all my fault, Pearl. I admit I was surly and rumpy. No wonder that even the kids were scared of me. But everything's better now. I've found out that constipation caused by lack of bulk in my diet can be licked! Believe me, I advise others who suffer the same way to do what I did: just eat a bowlful of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day and drink plenty of water. They say it's America's most famous laxative cereal—believe me, it sure gets my vote. Or make it up into muffins—they taste grand too... Come home, dear, and find a brand new man waiting for you. That's me—your ever-lovin' husband, JOE.

In agriculture the state of Indiana includes almost every staple crop; in mineral it produces coal, pig iron, petroleum, natural gas and many others. It also ranks high in manufacturing and in its wholesale trade.

The first American made rifles were manufactured in Pennsylvania in 1834. Like the axe and the plow, the other two tools with which this country was won, rifles were made by local smiths out of local iron.

Illinois' Historian

DR. PAUL M. ANGLE

Did you know that Illinois was the scene of the World's first automobile race? The contest was held on a road between Chicago and Waukegan in 1893.

Did you know that the first coal discovered in the United States was found in Illinois? Father Hennepin, French missionary and explorer, discovered the black gold along the Illinois River in 1679.

Or, did you know that the first ferris wheel was used at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago, in 1893?

These facts are part of the colorful history of Illinois told in the 1947 World Book Encyclopedia by Dr. Paul M. Angle, Director of the Chicago Historical Society.

T publishers of the World Book some time ago discarded the idea that an encyclopedia must be tedious and dull to read because it deals with facts. Dr. Angle's accurate, clear and readable article on Illinois has been hailed by educators as an excellent source of information for both young and old.

The author was born in Mansfield, Ohio, where he attended the public schools. Besides maintaining a healthy scholastic average, Paul Angle captained the football team, and also played football at Oberlin College and Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

Paul Angle entered the business world at the age of ten, as a part-time clerk in his father's grocery store. During the summer vacations of his college years he worked as an iceman, and after graduation, as a life insurance salesman and textbook salesman.

In 1922, he obtained an A.B. degree from Miami University, in 1924 he obtained an A.M. degree from the University of Illinois, and in 1941 was awarded a Litt. D from Augustana College. In 1944 he was awarded the degree of LL.D. from Knox College, and in 1947, the degree of D.H.L. from Illinois College, Jacksonville, Illinois.

In 1925, Dr. Angle joined the Lincoln Centennial Association (now the Abraham Lincoln Association) in Springfield, Illinois, which he served as executive secretary until 1932, when he became librarian of the Illinois State Historical Library. Since July 1, 1945, he has served as Director of the Chicago Historical Society.

Dr. Angle is the author of many books, including Lincoln 1844 to 1861 Here I Have Lived — A History of Lincoln's Springfield, Handbook of Illinois History (with Richard L. Beyer), Mary Lincoln Wife and Widow (with Carl Sandburg), A Shelf of Lincoln Books, and The Lincoln Reader (A Book-of-the-Month Club selection).

SLEEP IN WARM COMFORT WITH AN ELECTRIC BLANKET

Wouldn't it be fun to double-cross the weather on cold winter nights? You'd sleep right through without getting up to hunt for extra blankets or waking to pull one from the foot of the bed. With an electric blanket or comforter you can blissfully ignore the thermometer . . . open the windows wide and slip into a bed already warm.

Even mounds and mounds of ordinary blankets only insulate from the cold . . . but an electric blanket or comforter produces just the right amount of warmth no matter how the temperature shifts. You set the automatic control only once a season—from then on the electric blanket adjusts automatically to changing room temperatures.

You'll wake refreshed and relaxed. The weight of layers of covers is tiring . . . one electric blanket or comforter gives you warmth without weight. "Cold spots" are banished, too—your bed is sunny warm all over.

Lovely electric blankets and comforters launder and clean as beautifully as ordinary blankets or comforters. The only difference lies in having only one per bed to launder and store for the summer months—not three or four.

You've been promising yourself a really good night's sleep for a long time . . . do something about it today. For the details of real sleeping comfort . . .

General Electric Automatic Blanket—Choice of rose, blue, green and cedar. 72" x 86" big enough for a double bed.

Westinghouse Electric Comforter—Choice of rose, blue and green quilted satin comforter with non-slip back, removable warming sheet.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT TAXES?

(The Semmler Newspapers this week presents the second in a series of articles prepared by the Taxpayers' Federation of Illinois, located at 602 East Capitol avenue, Springfield, in which taxing is "explained." These articles will be published in the public interest, but it is to be distinctly understood that The Semmler Newspapers are not presenting these articles as necessarily representing the newspapers' views.)

Since the passage of the 100 per cent assessment laws in 1945, the lack of uniformity between counties has been substantially eliminated. The Illinois state department of revenue makes a study in each county, comparing the prices at which individual properties have been sold with the values at which those individual properties have been assessed, and arrives at a county-wide average, or ratio. For example, if a property has sold for $10,000 and was assessed at $2,500, then the ratio of assessed value to 100 per cent value on this property is 25 per cent. If the state department of revenue found this to be true on the average, then it would certify to the county clerk that the assessment ratio for the county was 25 per cent and would direct the county clerk to multiply the assessed value of every piece of real and personal property by four to raise the average assessment in the county to 100 per cent of full, fair cash value. (This simplified example gives the basic story, although the actual process by which the multiplier for your county is determined is more complicated. Details will be sent to anyone interested on request.)

You will note that this is an "average" 100 per cent value, and individual properties may in fact end up with a valuation either less than or more than 100 per cent.

If three different properties in a county actually sold for $10,000 each, and were assessed by different assessors at $3,500, $2,500 and $1,500, the average would still be $2,500, the multiplier would still be 4 and the 100 per cent valuations on these three properties for tax purposes would be $14,000, $10,000, and $6,000 respectively. The tax burden would be different on each of these properties, although the properties were identical in value in fact. However, this lack of uniformity in valuation, and the resulting inequality of tax burden, resulted from the process of local assessment and the failure of the Board of Review to equalize valuations. Since the multiplier applied to each property was the same, raising values to so-called 100 per cent did not change the already existing inequality in any way.

Despite the fact that the multiplier is determined by the state department of revenue by comparing prices at which real estate was sold with locally assessed valuations placed on that real estate, the assessed value of your personal property is multiplied by that same multiplier also. If your personal property as of April 1 is locally assessed at a greater percentage of full value than real estate is locally assessed, then you will pay more tax than you should on your personal property.

For example, assume you own a farm worth $10,000 and the value of your personal property—farm machinery, corn in the crib, etc.—on April 1 was also $10,000. Assume the farm was assessed at $2,500 and the personal property at $5,000, that the state department of revenue found the ratio of assessed value to prices paid for real estate in your county was 25 per cent on the average and therefore directed your county clerk to multiply all assessed values by four. The valuations on which you would pay taxes, unless you had your personal property assessment corrected by the board of review, would then be $10,000 for your farm and $20,000 for your personal property. You would be paying taxes on $20,000 worth of personal property that in fact was only worth $10,000.

The state department of revenue has no power to change any individual assessments within a county. The remedy of the individual taxpayer is to determine from the published assessment lists whether his property has been assessed on a fair basis compared to other similar properties in the same area and, if not, to try to get his assessment corrected by the board of review. If the board of review refuses to correct the assessment, then the taxpayer has final recourse to the courts through payment of taxes under protest.

The multiplier that has been certified by the department of revenue to the county clerk of Will county, for example, to be applied this year to your assessed value to raise that value to 100 per cent is 5.2632. Your assessor can tell you what your multiplier is.

Future articles in this series will describe the way in which the tax rate is determined that is applied to your property value to determine your tax bill.

COMMUNITY UNIT SCHOOL

DISTRICT IS EXPLAINED

Confusion is resulting from the term "community unit school district," used in connection with school district reorganization activities throughout the state, the Bureau of Research and Service, University of Illinois College of Education has reported.

Finding that the area which many persons refer to as a community is actually "just a neighborhood" the bureau explains:

"Sociologists define a community as an area which is able to sustain necessary services to all parts of the area for an extended period of time. It is composed of a population center and all the surrounding rural area from which people come to seek services at the urban center.

"A neighborhood may resemble a community, but it is not able to supply all the necessary services. If residents, whether urban or rural, have to leave the area for some service, such as banking facilities, medical services, and recreation, then the area is probably a neighborhood and not a community."

Pointing out that a true community should form the basis of an ideal school administrative district, the bureau states that a neighborhood is usually of sufficient size to support an elementary school or junior high school attendance area, but it is seldom, if ever, large enough for an administrative district.

Educational research has shown, the bureau indicates that a total school population of at least 1,600 pupils is needed in an administrative district if schools are to meet modern educational standards at reasonable cost. This would mean a total district population of approximately 8,000, considering 20 per cent of the total population as school children.

If the cost per pupil of an efficient school system is assumed to be $150, the minimum assessed valuation of a district this size would have to be $20,000,000, considering that the assessment would be one dollar on the full, fair cash value of the property, the bureau indicates. This figure also takes into account state funds to cover 15 per cent of the total cost, which is the average of state support for schools.

The agriculture of the state of Oklahoma is varied, combining the production of both the north and south. Corn, cotton and wheat are the largest among the many products of the farms of the state.

But near neighbors had arrived with their truck and the men were able to save most of the downstairs furnishings. The windmill, being close to the house, soon collapsed from the heat. The house had been decorated and repaired the past summer. It is not known how the fire started, but since the blaze started on the roof, it is thought the chimney may have been at fault.

HEART DISEASE RATED NATION'S WORST KILLER

Each year more deaths occur from heart disease than from any other single cause. The educational committee of the Illinois State Medical society, in a health talk, states that knowledge and care could reduce deaths from the many illnesses which stem from conditions affecting the heart.

Acting like a pump, the heart circulates the blood through the body. The heart itself is composed of a mass of muscles forming four chambers, which receive the blood brought to it from all parts of the body through the veins. This blood is first pumped to the lungs, where it receives fresh oxygen, and goes back to the heart, from arteries. After it has distributed its oxygen and other essential substances to the individual organs, it is collected into tiny vessels called capillaries, which feed it into the veins and thus back to the heart. The essentials of the circulation of the blood were discovered in 1615 by William Harvey, an English physician.

In the heart there is a series of chambers to let the blood in and out, a procedure systematically controlled by a series of valves. The four chambers of the heart are right and left ventricles and the right and left auricles. The veins pour the blood into the right side of the heart, from which the ventricle pumps it out to the lungs through the pulmonary artery. It returns oxygenated from the lungs to the left side of the heart, from which the left ventricle pumps it into the aorta or main artery, which distributes it through the arterial system throughout the body. There are thus four elements in heart action, the correct timing of which is controlled by a nerve "switchboard." Any trouble with the nerve control or any of the four chambers or with the valves which keep the flow going in the proper direction can thus be a source of heart disease.

The six most important causes of heart disease are rheumatic fever, which may damage the valve system; high blood pressure, which may overload the heart; sclerosis or hardening of the coronary arteries which supply blood to the heart muscle itself; syphilis, which especially affects the first part of the great artery, the aorta; subacute bacterial endocarditis, due to inflammation of the inner lining membrane and valves of the heart by a germ, streptococcus viridans, and congenital defects, meaning those existing at birth. Other conditions may damage the pericardium or outer covering of the heart.

Thus certain diseases may cause damage, slight or great, to the heart. Among specific heart conditions are angina pectoris, pain in the chest which sometimes extends down the arm, and caused by interference with the blood supply to the heart muscle; coronary clot of blood forming in a hardened thrombosis or occlusion, caused by a artery to block off the flow of blood to the heart muscle; myocarditis, or inflammation of the muscular walls of the heart, and chronic valvular disease of the heart. Various conditions can be responsible for so-called heart murmurs, or irregular heart beat, interruption of the blood to and from the heart.

Thus there are many specific types of heart disease, each of which is influenced by different factors.

Heart disease can be reduced. Let your doctor check your heart so that it cannot check you.

Can You Spare 100 Pounds of Corn?

Approximately on February 12th, the birth of the nation's greatest exponent of freedom, Abraham Lincoln, a train with food for starving Europe will leave Lincoln, Neb. As it moves east each state in the Mississippi Valley will add its cars of food.

Cook county is called on for a car of corn, wheat, flour, and other farm food products to supply this train with the country's share. If every farm family donates, it would require a very small amount per family. However, every family is requested to give at least 100 pounds of corn or its equivalent in flour, wheat, or cash. Those who can and operate larger farms are asked for proportionately more.

"We have designated Carl Bormet of Tinley Park to supervise south Cook county and Henry L. Moehling of Palatine for north Cook county," stated L. W. Pohlman, president of the Cook County Farm Bureau. "Each township is to be organized by the present board member. These members are requested to get school districts or other subdivisions at once to solicit and report back by February 7 which is a very short time. Plans to gather food will be announced later on. First we want to know how much each will give, and what will be given. You are requested to act quickly."

The following is the allotment for Cook county townships in this area and the township director:

Township: Bloom, Director, George F. Kloss, 3 tons; Bremen, A. A. Fulton, 2 tons; Lemont, Wm. Lister, 1 ton; Orland, Charles Erickson, 3 tons; Palos, Warren Macaulay, 1 ton; Rich, George H. Meyer, 3 tons; Thornton, C. W. Paarlberg, 3 tons; Worth, Jacob Ouwen-ga, 2 tons.

"It must be kept in mind that this is a private handling of relief—no governmental agency enters in and is sponsored by the Lutheran World Relief and Church World Service," states Mr. Pohlman.

They Talk It Over And Find It Pays

Periodically an Indiana manufacturer assembles his 2,500 workers for a man-to-man talk about the facts of life of his company and the nation's economy. Since he began, plant losses due to workers' errors have dropped 25 per cent, productivity has increased between 10 and 20 per cent.

The state of Connecticut, a great manufacturing center, boasts, also, of its agricultural interests, and points especially to a superior brand of tobacco it produces.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Do You Have Noisy Neighbors?

A lot of the neighbors were suddenly annoyed by Jeb Crowell's hammering at night. Jeb was building himself a new front porch—and the only time that he could give to it was after sundown.

Finally we decided the best thing to do was all pitch in and help—and get the carpentry over with as soon as possible. We did. Finished the porch next evening—and Jeb gratefully treated us to ice cold beer and cider.

From where I sit, that's what being a good neighbor means. Instead of complaining about the other fellow's habits, try to understand and share his interests.

So if my practicing on the flute annoys you, come on over, neighbor, with your fiddle or guitar and join me! Maybe it will end up in our knowing and appreciating one another better... in an evening of good fellowship. And I'll promise to provide the beer that goes with evenings of good fellowship!

RUSSIANS GET BUT TENTH OF U. S. WORKERS BOONS

After 30 years of "controlled economy" under the Soviet system, the Russian worker today finds the burden of high prices and scarcity of consumer goods a marked contrast to the economic independence and other boons enjoyed by the American workman under free, competitive enterprise.

According to recent New York Times survey, the Russian worker under Communism and the new "reduced" price schedules there can buy less than one-tenth as much for his labor as his American counterpart.

In terms of work necessary to earn a pound of white bread, for example, a Russian factory worker must labor 70 minutes, whereas an American workman can buy a similar loaf with seven and a half minutes' work. Rye bread, however, costs about half as much.

For a pound of veal the Russian works 315 minutes, as against the American's cost in time of 43 1-2 minutes. If the Russian worker wants sugar in his tea, he must give up the average earnings of two hours and 43 minutes. The American worker gets this in five and a half minutes.

Butter costs the Soviet worker more than a day's pay per pound, while to buy a pound of coffee he would have to work nearly two days. A package of cigarettes costs the Russian over two hours of labor.

Under the new ruble prices the average Russian workman must put in nearly four weeks to buy a new wool suit. He must work for 31 hours and 51 minutes to get money for a woman's cotton house dress.

Electrification Of Farms at Peak

The farm electrification program of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, launched in earnest over 20 years ago, was virtually completed during 1947 with 30,800, or 90 per cent, of the 31,117 farms in the company's 6,200 square-mile service area having electricity available at the end of the year.

This was disclosed recently by Britton I. Budd, president of the utility, who reported that 1947 additions to rural power lines brought the company's rural electric network to 7,356 circuit miles as of December 31.

The accelerated program brought electricity to the doors of 1,192 additional northern Illinois rural establishments during the year, leaving but 317 still beyond present power lines. Lines are now being built to bring electricity to 110 of these which have recently contracted for service, he said.

"Farmers are using more electricity than ever before," Mr. Budd said. "A generation ago, electricity on the farm generally meant a bare light bulb in the kitchen, but today electricity brings the same household conveniences to the farmer as to the city dweller."

"But even more important, new and better ways constantly are being devised for speeding farm production and farm chores through use of electric power."

Farm customers of Public Service used an average of 3,194 kilowatt-hours last year, an increase of 391 over 1946, he said.

Electric work-saving equipment listed by Mr. Budd as accounting for the growing use of power on northern Illinois farms includes pig and chick brooders; milking machines; milk coolers; milk stirrers; water warmers; water pumps; feed grinders and mixers; grain elevators; hay hoists; crop dryers; barn cleaners; silo unloaders; and lighting in the farm buildings, in addition to the usual household appliances such as refrigerators, ranges, water heaters, washers, freezers, irons, toasters, and radios.

Making Hay

Even in these days of the atom and high-flying airplanes, "making hay while the sun shines" is still the rule! And with farm labor costs at an all-time high, farmers find the modern sweep rake a fast and economical one-man way of handling hay to the barn or stack. The rake is lowered and raised by the tractor's hydraulic system. It has an automatic unloading device and can handle more than a quarter-ton at a time.

THE FACE OF WAR . . . Wounded officers and men who were injured in the pitched battles between regular Greek army forces and Red-sponsored insurgents around the strategic town of Konitsa wait by the roadside for transportation to the town of Yannina where they later were treated and hospitalized. These men are members of the regular Greek army. Sporadic fighting in the rugged, mountainous country of northern Greece has been under way for months as Communists continue to send guerrilla bands to harass Greek forces guarding the frontier.

PREVIEW OF ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY . . . This drawing, issued by Francis B. Wilby, chairman of the power authority of the State of New York, was prepared from the completed engineering plan of the St. Lawrence seaway and power project and shows how seaway will appear if and when it is built. The overall project calls for a 2.2-million-horsepower hydro-electric development near Massena, N. Y., in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence. Canada already has expended a large sum of money in the preliminary development of certain sections of the proposed seaway. In the U. S. congress will consider this year a bill authorizing complete construction of the project.

FROST CHAINS HUDSON RIVER . . . The mighty Hudson river, like many a more humble stream, was fair game for the jaws of winter as they clamped down over virtually the entire country and sent temperatures plummeting. Laureat Leclerc, who has been tending this lighthouse in the center of the Hudson river near Tarrytown, N. Y., for five years, has not often been able to walk to work as he is doing here. The oar is a safety measure to prevent him from falling completely through the ice in case it should crack under his weight. In a year distinguished by many and varied extremes of weather, this winter was playing its role to the hilt, offering 40-below temperatures.

LEGS FOR HIS CHARGES . . . Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, newly appointed chief medical director of Veterans' administration, surveys a battalion of artificial legs, designated for use by disabled World War II veterans, at VA headquarters in Washington, D. C. Dr. Magnuson, formerly with Northwestern university medical school, succeeds Dr. Paul R. Hawley, who resigned as Veterans' administration medical chief January 1.

MUZZLE-LOADER . . . Albert Mosher, Port Byron, Ill., farmer, pours powder charge into muzzle-loader brought west by his grandfather in the early 1880s. It is .44 calibre with double set trigger and Roman nose stock. Tallow-soaked "patches," used more than a century ago to grease the inside of the barrel before each firing, are still in a pocket built into the gunstock. Watching Mosher pour the powder from his grandfather's old powder horn is a neighbor, Frank M. Ziegler.

COLD WAR DRAFT . . . Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall told the senate foreign relations committee that the U. S. may have to return to the draft unless the Marshall plan is approved.

INCLUDE HIM OUT . . . If Secretary of State George Marshall can be believed, there is at least one prominent public figure who will not be running either for president or vice president next November, and that is Secretary of State Marshall. Quizzed as to whether he would consider being running-mate for Mr. Truman this year, he shoved his hands deep into his pockets and answered: "I don't think any reply to that question is required in the light of what has been said. I will never be involved in politics. I cannot be a candidate for any office." Marshall's greatest desire is to retire from public life to his Virginia home.

WAR BRIDES FROM NIPPON . . . Now it's Japanese war brides who are starting to arrive in the United States in greater force. Home from occupation duty in Japan, these are two of the American soldiers who landed in Seattle with their newly won Japanese wives. Sgt. and Mrs. Vincent P. Costello of Philadelphia (left) and Cpl. and Mrs. Doyle Sims of Memphis, Tenn., are interviewed by a customs officer upon their entry into the U. S.

PASSING THE BUCKS ON A BREADLINE . . . For a little while they were handing out no bread on the daily breadline at St. Francis monastery in New York. Instead the unfortunates who come there for a little of the staff of life got dollars. Joseph Snyder, who won $250 on a radio program, decided there were others who needed the money more than he did, so he passed out his prize money, a dollar at a time, to the habitués of the breadline.

SPUDS AND SEAFOOD . . . The annual senate debate on the relative merits of the Louisiana shrimp and sweet potato vs. the Maine lobster and potato took place at a congressional luncheon, with the argument ending, as usual, in a draw. Here, Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep., Me.) feeds a bit of lobster to Sen. John Overton (Dem., La.) as Elsie Waters (left) and Betty Green watch entranced.

New Method Simplifies Building Poultry House

ANYONE who can drive a nail and saw a board should be able to build this poultry house.

The pattern now available at small cost provides—first, a complete purchase list of lumber needed and explains exactly where each piece is used; second, it contains complete step by step directions written in language everyone can understand; third, it provides assembly illustrations which show the location of each framing member and fourth, full size patterns are provided for cutting all angles on rafters and gable studs. These are traced directly on to the wood. The rafters and gable studs are then cut to the drawn lines.

Measuring 10 feet by 10 feet this house provides an ideal place for a small flock of hens. Its size, however, is such that many people use it for storage of garden tools or for use as a backyard workshop. Send 60c in coin for House Pattern No. 14 to Pattern Publishing Company, P. O. Box 215, Pleasantville, New York.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up lights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

FOUR FLIGHTS UP TO HEAVEN

By FREDERICK LAING

THE landlady was smiling at them like the wolf in Red Ridinghood. "You look kinda young to be a married couple."

"Oh we aren't married yet," Peggy blurted out. She felt Bill's fingers tighten on her arm. "So you better show us that apartment before she changes her mind," he added.

She glanced up at him with a nervous little smile, feeling ashamed, wishing she hadn't let him read her thoughts.

The landlady laughed and Peggy laughed louder than she'd wanted to.

"We want two rooms," Bill said, "two rooms and a decent kitchen. And not facing on the street, please. Too many trucks in Greenwich Village to suit me."

"I adore the Village," Peggy said quickly. The trouble was, the words seemed to jump out before she knew what she was going to say.

Bill stared up at a long crack in the ceiling. "Sure, we adore the Village."

She pinched him when the landlady wasn't looking and he gave her hair a tug, and everything was all right again. They followed the landlady up the stairs. She had just the thing for them, she said. "A couple of kids like you won't mind walking up four flights."

"Oh, no," Peggy answered. Then she glanced at Bill. "Well, would we?"

Bill looked up at the ceiling again. "Oh, no."

She knew what he was thinking. And it was true. She didn't want to live in a place that had elevators. Bad enough to have him come home talking about them every night. Bad enough to have to answer the neighbors' questions with, "My husband? Oh he... er, sells elevators." She could see them lifting their eyebrows. "Elevators? Pardon me for smiling, Mrs. Bill, but I never knew any one had to sell elevators. I always thought they... just happened."

No, definitely not a place with elevators. She didn't want to be reminded of her husband's business every time she went in and out of the house.

The landlady's short, bowed legs were leading them up the stairs briskly, showing them how easy it was to climb four flights. "You'll find it nice and quiet here, I'm sure. The gentleman who has it now has been there three years. And he's a writer."

"A writer?" Peggy had kind of a funny feeling all of a sudden. Like she'd gone up in an elevator too fast. A writer. That was what she'd always thought she'd marry some day. Or maybe an artist. Somebody like that.

Peggy Is Intrigued

They were walking up the last flight now and some one upstairs opened a door. Don't let him be any better looking than Bill, she begged.

As it happened, he wasn't. He was just a pale young man with glasses. He stood there in his slacks and blue shirt and he looked... well, on second glance he looked... different. Nobody would ever take him for a life guard. That's what she'd thought Bill was that first time, when they'd met on the beach.

"Come right in." The young man waved something at them. It turned out to be a monkey wrench, of all things. "Don't mind me, I'm just the plumber."

Peggy laughed. It was so unexpected, it made her feel good. "The plumber," she said, as their eyes met, "Imagine."

"Some plumber," the landlady said.

"That's gratitude," he said, looking at Peggy. "I do her a favor and she makes fun of my plumbing." "I think it's nice if a man knows how to fix the plumbing," Peggy said. She glanced from the thin hands to the thin, pale face. "I really do."

He looked pleased. "I'm a painter, too," he told her. "Look, I painted this china closet. What do you think of the shade?"

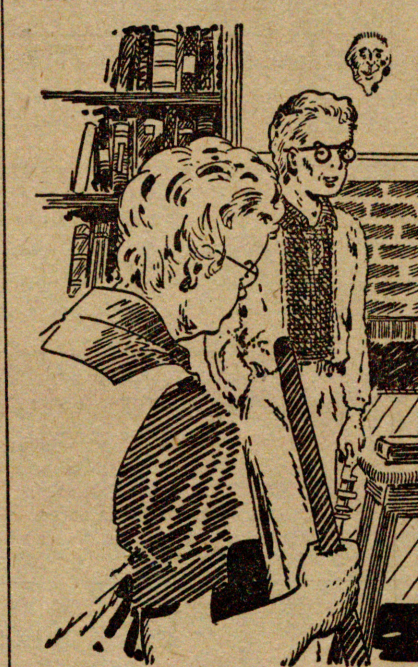

It made her feel so flattered to have a writer showing off for her benefit. "It's a lovely color," she told him. And then she could feel Bill's eyes on her. "Isn't it, Bill?" "Yeah," Bill said dryly, "blue."

Peggy winced. Well, that proved he wasn't color blind.

"It's the same shade as your hat," this writer was saying.

She blushed. "Think of a man's noticing that."

"Yeah," Bill said. The way he said it, it wasn't exactly a compliment.

"I think it's nice if a man knows how to fix the plumbing," Peggy said. She glanced from the thin hands to the thin, pale face. "I really do."

"If you want to see the apartment," the landlady began sharply. Then she pulled a smile over her false teeth. "This here's the kitchen."

Bill said, "You mean the apartment opens into the kitchen?"

Behind his glasses, the young man's light blue eyes were looking amused. "Oh you'll get used to it. And it'll give your friends something to talk about."

"He's some little talker himself, isn't he?" the landlady said.

"I think he's wonderful," Peggy said, laughing. He certainly knew how to make a person feel perfectly at ease.

Then she got a look at Bill's face. She began to feel miserable. If only he wouldn't look like that. Like a... She tried to push the thought out of her mind but it came right back again. Like a disappointed salesman. I'm sure you'll make a mistake if you don't buy our elevators, Mr. Kotch.

The landlady led them into the living room, and when Peggy saw it, her heart sat up and begged.

Her eyes drank in the bookcase that covered a whole wall, the original paintings on unframed canvas, the oversized fireplace with three painted masks above it. And there was a table with a typewriter and a lot of papers piled-up in careless stacks.

What darling taste you have. She almost said it, but she thought about Bill just in the nick of time.

"The bedroom's in there," the landlady said. She let Peggy and Bill go into the bedroom by themselves. Bill's head almost bumped the top of the doorway as they went in together.

"This is a dog house," he said.

Peggy was in such a daze she thought he said, "Doll's house," at first.

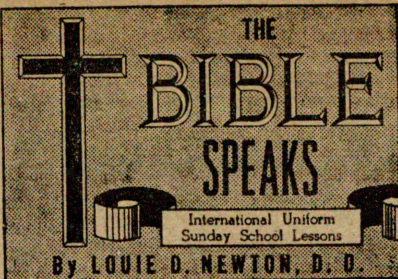

"Isn't it," she said excitedly. And then, seeing his expression, "What?"

"A dog house," he said. "Look, I can almost touch the ceiling. Listen Peggy. I've learned something about buildings in the elevator business. Do you know how old this house is? Why, it was a dump when they built the Brooklyn bridge."

Peggy gasped. "He heard you!"

Suddenly all the thrill was gone and her heart felt like lead. Her eyes were blinking as she turned and went back into the living room. Bill followed behind her, stooping with an exaggerated wariness as he went through the doorway.

Her fingers were twisting the engagement ring nervously around

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

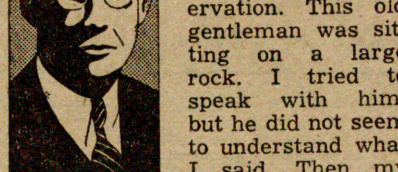

By LOUIE D. NEWTON, D. D.

SCRIPTURE: John 6:35-40; 13:3-17; Colossians 1:9-20; DEVOTIONAL READING: Philippians 2:5-11.

The Nature of Jesus

Lesson for February 8, 1948

ONE of the most discerning comments on the nature of Jesus I have ever heard came from an aged Indian in one of the western states a few years ago when I chanced to be waiting for a friend at the entrance of the reservation. This old gentleman was sitting on a large rock. I tried to speak with him, but he did not seem to understand what I said. Then my friend drove up, and introduced me to the Indian. "This man knows our Jesus," my friend said to the Indian. His face brightened, and he held out his hand to me. "Jesus help Indian love white man," he said. Just so, Jesus helps white man love white man, too.

The lesson for Sunday is found in John 6:35-40; 13:3-17; and Colossians 1:9-20, with Philippians 2:5-11 as the devotional reading.

TEACHER AND LORD

TAKE the opening passage, John 13:3-17, where Jesus is pictured as taking a basin of water and towel, kneeling at the disciples' feet, washing their feet, and drying them. Do you not feel the blessed Saviour's very nature, flooding the scene?

It requires true love, true humility, to serve in that role. Suppose someone came to render this service to you? And suppose that One was the Son of God?

Why did Jesus wash the disciples' feet? Because he loved them, and he wanted them to love other people enough to do for them anything that would convince them of the love which they had in their hearts for them. Here we see him as the great teacher.

"AS I HAVE LOVED YOU"

BUT Peter draws back. He cannot conceive of Jesus washing his feet. Why? Because Peter did not yet understand the nature of Jesus. The memory verse for Sunday is helpful just here. Jesus said, "Love one another; even as I have loved you," John 13:34.

Peter acted very naturally, even if we may be tempted to say that he acted foolishly. In fact, he acted just about like any of us would have acted under similar circumstances.

But when Jesus explained to Peter what he was about, Peter then asked that Jesus wash not only his feet, but also his hands and head.

THIS IS JESUS

INTERMEDIATES, young people and adults, having carefully read the passage in the 13th chapter of John, where Jesus washes the disciples' feet, will now turn to John 6:35-40, and Colossians 1:9-20, and see the expansion of this great truth over into the expressed will of God for his followers.

A true understanding of this section will lead us to ponder prayerfully the nature of Jesus in the various titles accorded him in the Scriptures—Son of Man, Son of God, Master, Rabbi, Teacher, Physician, Vine, Light, Good Shepherd, Bread of Life, Comforter, Friend and Saviour.

All of these titles he bore, and yet we see him kneeling to wash the feet of everyday people. "Thy gentleness hath made me great," Intermediates and young people will wisely set themselves to the task of identifying the nature of Jesus in the people of their community. Such study will lead you to earnestly seek to walk in his blessed example, loving as he loved.

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"

AND now we are ready for the climax of the lesson, when Peter declares, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God," Matthew 16:16.

We cannot long stand in the presence of the story of this lesson and fail to conclude with Peter that none save the Son of God can do such wondrous things—can love as he loved.

Beginning with the Incarnation, we follow through the sweeping claims of Jesus, and we know of a truth that he was very God. Convinced, then, that we are in the presence of God when we contemplate the nature of Jesus, what are we to say? Does not Isaac Watts suggest the answer?

When I survey the wondrous cross,
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

See, from his head, his hands, his feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down,
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all!

THE GOLDEN HILLS

Grace Nell Crowell

ONCE in a dark and troubled time
When I saw no road ahead,
A wise and kindly counselor
Sat by my side and said:
"Each morning I drive down a valley road
To get to my work, and I
Can often see nothing at all for the fog
That blots out the earth and sky,
But I say to myself, 'I shall drive ahead,
Carefully, without sight.
For I know I shall come onto higher ground
Where the hills are gold with light!
And I just keep on...'
Oh, wise kind words
That fell on my heart that day,
Nothing can blot them from my mind,
Nothing can take them away,
And now when a thick fog shuts me in
To choke me and blind my eyes,
I am so glad for the hills ahead,
For the friend who was kind and wise!

Canadian Ski Season In Full Swing

THE ski season is now in full swing, coast to coast, in Canada with indications that the popular and celebrated skiing resorts all the way from the Laurentian Mountains of Quebec to Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies, will have a record-breaking season. Every type of winter sport may be enjoyed in and around Montreal, which is the gateway to the celebrated

Laurentian Mountain winter playground. Special Canadian National ski trains link Montreal with Laurentian resorts. Other popular skiing areas in Quebec province include Grand Pere, Quebec City, Lake Beauport, Baie St. Paul and Valcartier. In western Canada, Jasper National Park with an area not much smaller than Switzerland, great areas have been set aside for skiing, with an abundance of open slopes and miles of runs and trails. In the above photo (left) a Jasper skiing party is shown "camping out" in the deep snow, under brilliant sun in the shadow of one of Jasper's towering mountains.
